

Garden House

In the center of the city, two apartments were joined to make one to overcome the shortcomings of the original small and dark rooms. The renovation was to combine the spaces and create an efficient house to cater to the requirements of a family while taking advantage of the region's pleasant weather.

The new design zoned the apartment into two parts. One area was the more open kitchen, dining and living spaces overlooking the large garden. The other was the more private area comprising the family and bedrooms. The entire house was to be made larger by introducing movable boundaries within the apartment as well as between the inside and the outdoor spaces.
